Before The Sun's Up

6:00 a.m.

BZZZZZZZZZZ!

UNHGNNN! Click. BZZZ — *
HMMNNN 6:09 a.m.

BZZZZZZZZ! Oh Hell! God I hate mornings; what with it being so early in the day and all, with its chilled air and cold floors, also that crusty stuff on your eyes and pasty film in your mouth. I'll never understand how, close to twelve hundred teenagers submit to this torture put upon them by those authoritarian adults called the Board of Education. I thought teenagers were supposed to rebel against authority. Oh well, on with the story.

Creak. I never know if that is my bed or my joints making that sound.

Scuff scuff scuff. Ever notice how it is impossible to lift your knees right after you wake up? Skweeek. Shshshshshsh.

AAIIIEEEE!! Skweeek skweeek. AHHHHHH. One thing that always fascinates me is the tendency for shower water to come out ice cold, no matter where you set the dial. Speaking about showers, they must be one of the greatest inventions given to students. They have the ability to take a lifeless hunk of flesh, with about as much intelligence as a piece of celery, and transform it into something that can grasp even the most fleeting concepts like; homeroom will be extended, and the order of periods will be F-D-B-G-E-C-A. Of course this state of mind does not last long because of the existence of a phenomenon known as first period. But I was talking about mornings.

Schzzzzz. Those of you that do not use hairdryers, but the freeze dry method will just have to bear with me for the moment.

Schzzzzz. Okay.

Shht. Shht. Zzzzzzp. Being a guy I only know what putting on pants sounds like, so all you women out there forgive my ignorance. If I am lucky, and remember to do the laundry, I get to choose from a selection of clean clothes. Believe it or not, this does happen most of the time. Usually my clothes even match. Not to say that they have to. At least thirty percent of the student body, and at least one teacher, do not seem to think so.

Thump thump thump thump. Click. Rrrrrt.

Whoops!

Click. Rrrrrt. Whump. Click. Rrrrrt. Slam. I cannot remember a day when I didn't forget something. The main problem with that is that eighty percent of those times I was already at school when I remembered I forgot it. This is where being a senior pays off, if you have a car of course. You could always drive home during your least interesting class and retrieve your beloved possession if it was absolutely necessary.

Tch. Wumpph. Shht. Rvrrrooom rvroom. Skreeech. You know, it is wonderful how our minds can sort all our priorities. We have a distinct knack for determining what is most important and what is not. For example, all the stop signs someone has taken great care to place at busy intersections, and the very fair and reasonable speed limits, posted for our and fellow drivers' safety, hold about as much value as a plumber telling me that the brown spots on my skin are calcium deposits, and that I should see his cousin, a gypsy, to remove them with a dead rat. All I know is that if I am late to A period, I am going to have to walk back from Wapping in forty degree weather to get a pass from the office, and then walk back to Wapping just in time to thaw out in the last five minutes of class before going back to the High School for B period.

Rvroomm — * Tch. Slamm. Trudge trudge trudge. Oh well, might as well get it over with.

"School is like Coca-Cola. It adds life." . . . Susan Pointer (jun.)

"School is a bowl of nuts. Everyone in it is cracked." . . . Stefan Klein (sr.)

"Take it easy, would ya? You already spent more time in driving school than you have in high school!" . . . Billy Mann (jr.)

The calm of the hallway lies waiting for the mob of students to return for yet another day.

The straggling latecomers finally make their way up the slopes from the parking lot into the world of academics.

A Touch Of Class

Why do we come to school? The answer is simple. To learn, right? Okay, how do we learn? That's also simple. We learn by going to class.

Ah ha! Too bad it isn't that simple. Classes come in all different shapes and sizes, emotions and attitudes, curriculums and colors, and mazes and monsters.

To start off with there is English, the only course you have to take every day of your high school career. For your first three years, you take what they give you, but come Senior year you get to decide what to take! This year they even gave us another choice, the Journalism/Graphic Arts class. This is the class where students actually have to keep track of the weeks so they know which room they have to be in. One week you could be in the computer room in Wapping, the next week you would go to the Graphics room in the High School.

Mathematics is always a fun class. Nowhere else could you learn a foreign language with a calculator. The world of algebra was very educational. It showed me that you could have a mile long problem and end up with nothing. Geometry came next, Euclidian of course. Now I know that no matter what direction I am going in, and hundreds of people are blocking me at right angles, there is at least one person with parallel thoughts. Along came Trigonometry, sometimes the angle of depression was equivalent to my angle of interest. But it did tell me that even though I am looking for the sine to theta, I should figure out if my coordinates are correct. Ah, Calculus! As the limit of understanding approaches confusion, the function of my brain equals sleep.

The Science field is subdivided into biological and physical sciences. Everyone loves the biological ones, you get to cut things up and poke around inside them for a while. I favor the physical science more, though. There is that ever lurking thought of being a scientist that finally develops the warp drive, null-gravity field, or the space fold system for more efficient space travel. The guys at NASA are going about it all wrong. There is no way you can develop a faster-than-light drive using combustion.

Social Studies would be one of the best categories, except for the mandatory class of U.S. History. If I had to pick one course from my entire academic life that I would not want to take it would be Bricklaying: A Study in Mortar. U.S. History comes in second. The other classes are extremely fascinating. I enjoyed Psychology myself, finding out how the brain and mind work. I figure if I can do that for a normal person I can second-guess myself.

I could never forget gym, oops, sorry, physical education. That has to be the most misleading title, education? Where? All I heard was, "Here is the ball, you know what to do with it." I was thinking about the credits for gym a while ago. How come we only get one quarter of a credit for a class we take every six days? Last I heard two divided by six is one third. I should have been done with gym last year. Nah, probably not, they will just raise the required credits again anyway.

This is only a sample of everything one student goes through during his four year sentence. I mean four years of character building and growing maturity that is High School.

Ken Smith is training to be a homekeeper in his D period foods class.

Lisa Mansella, Lisa Visgilio, and Heather Diamond are busy laying out their own newspaper in the newly formed Journalism and Graphic Arts class.

Mike Sladyk cruises through the typing speed test.

Laurie St. Laurent uses her study hall to get that last minute homework done.

Let's Do Lunch

"Soggy fries and mysterious hamburgers have got to go." . . .
Steve Varga (jr)

"Exquisitely tasting, finely blended and decorated enough to satisfy even the hungriest palate, yet makes you throw up an hour later." . . .
Dawn Winar (jr)

"All I want is some really fresh fruit." . . .
Heather Diamond (sr)

"Why the @! don't they make enough french fries!" . . . Ed Griffin (sr)

"Variety is the spice of life. (pun intended)" . . . Chuck VanHorn (sr)

"Its edible . . . I guess." . . . Tim Popick (sr)

"Covered with ketchup anything is edible." . . . Heather Diamond (sr)

As 11:00 rolls around, the thoughts of the students are turning from their books to food. There are three types of students in the cafeteria. The first group are those who have eaten school lunch before and opt to bring a "brown bag" from home. What is in these bags is known only to the owner. They usually contain a sandwich, chips and, of course dessert. These people purchase milk and the "cool guys" don't use straws. The second group of people are the ones on permanent diets. They drink just orange juice and eat only salad. There seems to be a disease that hits all girls when they enter high school. It has them worried that one meal will cause them to gain 10 pounds. These people don't need to worry because when they graduate and get away from school food, the disease mysteriously goes away. The last group of people in the cafeteria are the ones who seem to enjoy waiting in mile long lines. I don't see why these people wait so long for school food. I would understand if there were a prize at the end of the line. By the time these people get out of line, they have almost 10 minutes to gobble down the food. We can't complain about the length of the lunches because we now have a new lunch schedule. This lunch gives us an extra 10 minutes or so! It also brings back memories of grade school when we all walked to lunch together, ate, and then left together. The scary thing is that no matter how much the people complain about the food, they continue to eat it . . .

After patiently waiting for his Bobcat burger and fries, he piles his tray with mounds of ketchup.

Chuck VanHorn wisely eats his lunch from a brown bag brought from home not trusting the mystery meat.

George Zack restrains Brian Peck from pelting the photographer with his french bread pizza by attempting to consume the weapon during first lunch.

Rich Beganski rumages through the miscellaneous accessories to make his homemade lunch complete.

Alex Vargas is in a state of euphoria over his chocolate milk while Sue Gavini and Katie Plummer finish their school bought meals.

Life After School

The time; 1:52, the bell rings and life once again fills the halls of South Windsor High School. Freshmen and Sophomores run for the nearest exits while Juniors and Seniors calmly stride to their lockers because they have driven to school.

Then there are those who stay after school for various reasons. All the athletic people head for the locker rooms to change for their appropriate sports; some for soccer, some for football, some for volleyball, and yet others for cross country. Students with musical and acting talents strive for greatness in the auditorium. Struggling and/or problem students trudge along for extra help or the dreaded detention!

Outside awaits the yellow mass of steel which provides transportation for many students. Groups of people fill the busses' walkways; smokers, radio-listeners, and people who are just trying to get the back seat of the bus. The student parking lot, like in the morning, comes to life. People, desperately rushing to get out, cause more delays.

Once free of the school's boundaries, decisions have to be made. What will people do for the rest of the day? Some go to work at places like Caldors, McDonald's or Deals; jobs that they work hard at and never get enough pay for the work they do. On the other hand, some get together with their friends and just hang out. Those without friends, or friends who are busy, go home and watch t.v.: soap operas, games shows, and yes, even cartoons. If nothing good is on t.v., sleep is always a possibility. If all else fails, if there is absolutely nothing left to do . . . DO YOUR HOMEWORK!!!

"Teachers give too much homework."

. . . Nick Malapestas (soph.)

"Detentions are useless because they are a waste of time for everyone involved."

. . . John Neel (soph.)

"Who wants to watch t.v. when we could be doing homework."

. . . Cindy Terwilliger (sr.)

"There are alot of different activities that anyone can join. That's what makes this school tick."

. . . Beth Rittenband (sr.)

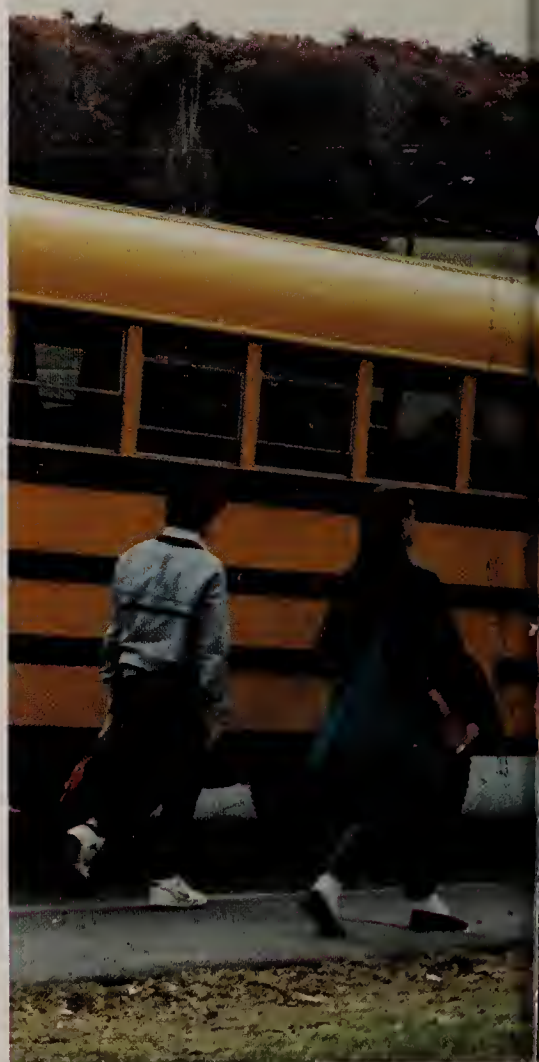

"Dententions are un-called for because they don't teach any sort of lesson."

Chris Thomas, Dana Koenig, Mike Sladyk and Margie Callan rehearse a scene in the fall production of "Tom Jones".

Wendy Wetherell chats on the phone while preparing to cheer on the Bobcats.

John Heath engages in a game of basketball with his friends while Rick Sartor dribbles a soccer ball.

As the school day draws to a close, students head towards their transportation to take them away from education for the night.

Students enjoy moving to the music at the first Friday night Shades dance of the season.

"I don't know what I'd do without them." . . . Melissa Neary (sr.)

"I don't do weekdays." . . . Amy Sheehan (jr.)

"They are the best part of the week." . . . Ken Morgester (sr.)

"Without weekends, the weekdays wouldn't seem so bad." . . . Chris Thomas (sr.)

"Weekends are sure better than weekdays." . . . Kelly Chils (jr.)

Weekly Vacations

Weekends are a time for hard work and heavy studying — right?

Yeah Right! For most of us, the weekends are a time for throwing aside the books, at least until Sunday night. Weekends are a time for us to work, sleep, and most of all, play and enjoy. We have soccer games, cross country meets, hockey games, and oh those football games! Some of us have jobs and make some money, do our homework, or just let loose and party all weekend! TGIF has got to be the motto of every kid attending high school. I don't know what we'd do without our two-day vacation of the week! After slaving over our books all week, studying and writing papers, until our minds and bodies have practically withered away; we deserve these two magical days!

Things like movies, shopping, college visits, babysitting, and sleep play a major role in our weekends. Some people do nice quiet things like crossword puzzles, horseback riding, reading, or cooking.

Well no matter what we do on weekends, we do something worthwhile for ourselves. From partying till we drop, to work, quiet time, or sleep, we all do our own thing and we thoroughly enjoy it!

Just take a look at weekends and you know they've got to be something really special to make another day look so dreadful — MONDAY!

Students are having a Saturday night snack at the famous D.Q.

Bobcat football games are a weekend pastime for many South Windsor students.

Some students spend their weekend dancing the night away.

Show Your True Colors

Put on those hats, slide on your shades, it's Spirit Week at South Windsor High School! Oh, of course we had a Hat and Shades Day. But that was just the beginning of it all. There was a Hawaiian Day and, oh boy, a Clash Day!

Hat and Shades Day brightened up our Monday morning blahs. There were a variety of different hats: baseball hats, hard hats, sombreros, fun hats, small hats, colorful hats and even cowboy hats.

Hawaiian Day gave us all summertime blues from flowered shirts to Jam shorts and shades too. The spirits were high when all the classes participated and the turnout was excellent!

Clash day was the best! The colors were atrocious! Paisleys with stripes and huge striped ties and zoot suits made it unbelievable!

Maroon and gold day ended our Spirit Week and many people dressed for the occasion showing their "true colors". A pep rally at the end of the day brought together all the classes and we all proved just how much spirit we have. Seniors, of course, came in first place for spirit. The class of '89 following close behind, took second. Danny Sasso, class of '87, won the numerous number of jelly beans in the jelly bean contest which was sponsored by the seniors for Leukemia.

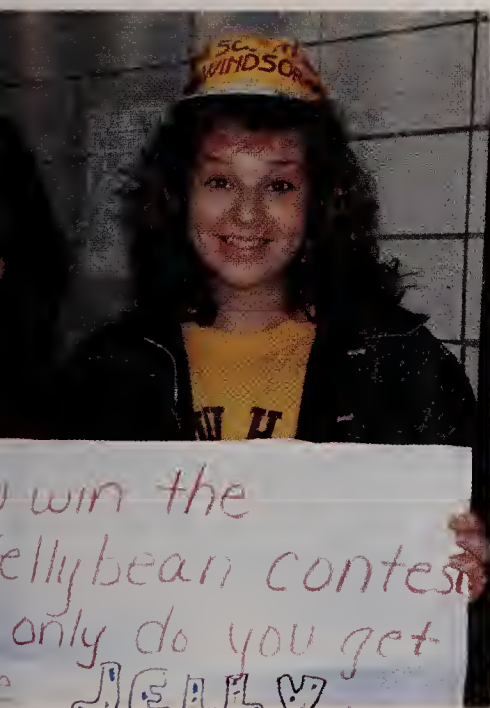

So what's pink and yellow, maroon and gold, wearing sunglasses and having a Hawaiian attitude? The students at South Windsor High School.

These seniors express their Hawaiian spirit in a pyramid during a usually monotonous study hall.

Jennifer Brown, Cindy Myette and Julie Krawski display their school spirit by wearing the school colors, maroon and gold.

Terry Smith in this outlandish garb participates in Clash Day.

Excitement wells as Cindy Terwilleger flanked by Lucy Ordway and Pete Rios race across the gym floor setting off the fall pep rally.

A New Tradition

The first annual Homecoming triggered a promising tradition. Saturday afternoon football kicked off the day. After a long needed sleep until noon I dragged myself out of bed. Putting on my comfortable jeans and sweat shirt, I was ready to go to the game. In the stands I chit-chatted with all my friends about our exciting weekend plans, while missing all 6 of our touchdowns. During halftime the band performed as usual - but again we ignored them. We did watch the new bed races, however. The winners, composed of field hockey players, won by a mile - actually only 50 yards. The only two casualties were a cabbage patch doll and a teddy bear. One bed collapsed in the middle of the field and the rider tumbled to the ground. Each team was dressed as little girls in their pajamas. The winners received 10 dollar gift certificates for East Hartford Cinemas - that's two whole movies worth!

The King and Queen and their court rode around the field on borrowed time since several of the royalty were involved in other activities. Such as the football game itself, cheerleading, and playing in the band. The final score against Hartford Public was 45 to 14, a grand way to begin a new tradition.

The football game was followed by the Homecoming dance Saturday night. Despite the world series opening game, a tremendous amount of students attended. We didn't miss the game, though. Anyone who wished could grab a snack at the cafeteria doors and watch the World Series on the school's T.V.

The "ballroom" in the gymnasium was decorated festively with maroon and gold streamers and balloons filled with tootsie roll surprises. A great DJ played popular music as the 400 attendants danced the night away. Eleven o'clock came sooner than expected and students headed for their cars, while trying to adjust their eyes to the suddenly lit gymnasium. It was a day the school will never forget.

"The game should've been against Rockville." . . . Chris Thomas (sr)

"It was the best dance we ever had." . . . Angie Serkosky (sr)

"It was a great idea that should become a tradition." . . . Beth Rittenband (sr)

"Dancing is an expressive act in which people interpret the way they feel." . . . Katie Plummer (soph)

"The best part of Spirit Week was the homecoming dance." . . . Glen Christianson (sr)

"Dance is an expression of life, love and feelings." . . . Sue Pugliese (sr)

Jean Moriarty, Ellen Levintan, Laura Kapytko and Maura Policelli carry Lisa Mansini to victory at the bed races.

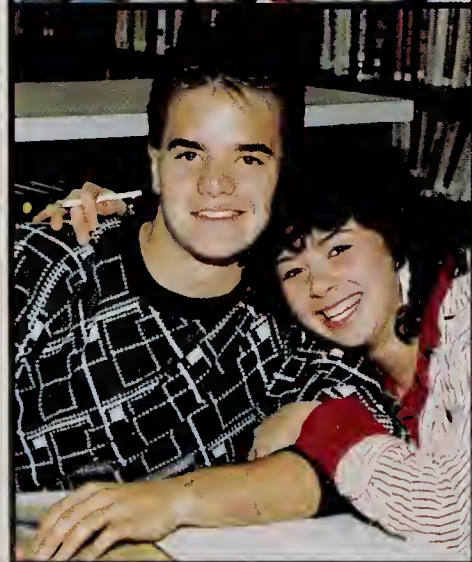

Homecoming King and Queen make their appearance at half-time.

John and Jennifer share a special moment on the dance floor.

Friendship

*Friendship is more than just saying "hi".
Friendship is more and I'll tell you why.
Friendship is being there for that very special person-that friend.*

Friendship is talking about everything-good and bad.

Friendship is a special bond that ties those people together-those special friends.

Friendship is feeling comfortable with that person with whom you share so much-the one you really trust.

Friendship, in short, is just plain love-for someone very special-your friend.

*Keep the spirit
shining bright;
it brings us close
and shows the light.*

*We need each other through thick and thin,
and with this feeling
we will always win.*

*Like a statue
we stand proud and tall, able to take life
with its heights and falls.*

*Though as we go on living each day,
may we think of each other in our own special way.*

*As time goes by,
we drift apart,
but all of us
need a new start.*

*Though a new chapter begins in our life pretty soon, think of each other
like an old favorite tune;
one that you never forget because it meant so much.*

*Our class of 1987
may we always keep in touch...*

Special Honors

Lisa Visgilio received both the Daughters of the American Revolution Award and the Yale Book Award. The Yale Book Award was to be awarded to a junior in the top ten percent of the class that showed qualities of scholarship, leadership, effective teamwork, and organizational abilities. Her rank in class, membership on the student council, seat on the senior and junior executive boards and participation in crosscountry, indoor track and track and field, lettering in all three spots, earned Lisa this honor. The DAR award was voted on by the senior class, and then the top three names were voted on by the faculty. Lisa was chosen for her leadership, dependability, service, cooperation, courtesy, and patriotism to the school, community, and nation. Lisa obviously is well-deserving of both of these honors. Congratulations Lisa!

Jason Lee received the Rensselaer Medal for his outstanding achievements in math and science. His math and science teachers chose him for this special honor. Jason was also awarded the Harvard Book Award which is given to a student who combines excellence in scholarship and significant achievement in other fields. The award was based on his rank in class, academic performance and SAT scores among other achievements in school. The award is supposed to be given to a student who would stand an above average chance of acceptance to Harvard. Jason obviously fills these requirements and well-deserved these honors. Congratulations Jason!

Emma Hughes received the Brown University Book Award for her high degree of excellence in written and spoken English as well as for her outstanding personal qualities. Congratulations Emma! There is no doubt that she will merit congratulations for many other achievements in the years to come.

Byran Gavini, who is a contributing senior, received the Holy Cross Book Award last year. The award was based on his commitment to school and the community, his outstanding scholastic achievements, and his caring for others. Bryan is treasurer of his CYO church group, participates in three varsity sports and is the captain of the hockey and Lacrosse teams. By being well rounded he deserved this recognition. Congratulations Bryan!

In Memory Of...

*It's still so hard to believe that you had to leave.
Why you were chosen to go we will never know.
Although you are in a different place,
We walk down the halls and see your face.
We see you as a leader, always so cheerful...
so friendly, so helpful.
With your smile, your glow, and the twinkle
in your eyes
You touched the hearts of many lives.
With your friendships you brought laughter,
And you brought many tears with your departure.
But time goes on and life begins again
And you will always be remembered by your friends.
Now the world belongs to you and you are free just like those birds above the trees.
Your spirits will always remain very near because you were so special and very dear.
And in our memory you will always be good, good friends to us.
So wherever you are - look for us because someday, we too will be free...*

Foreign Exchange Students

Ever since I have arrived in CT I have met many people and made many friends. My stay here in South Windsor has been a wonderful experience. The staff and student body welcomed me openly and took me in as a member of S.W.H.S. My year at South Windsor High, as a senior has been a time I will treasure always. I will never forget coming here for this year because of all the fun and interesting times while staying here in your country with you and the Erickson family. Thank you for making my school year and my visit here enjoyable and possible.

Maria Portegez

I would like to thank my parents and yfu for giving me the opportunity of becoming an exchange student in the United States. In the beginning it was a little hard to get used to the school because the schools in Denmark are so different. We don't go from class to class, or have the same schedule every day, and school doesn't begin as early. I will always remember playing soccer and the friends I made on the team. I would like to thank SWHS and the class of 87 for making this a very special year for me - one that I will always remember.

Rikke Hahnel

Dedication

Mrs. Patricia Davidson taught at Ellington High School for four years and then left teaching to be at home with her children. She returned to teaching first as a long term substitute at SWHS and then was hired last year as a full-time teacher.

Mr. Plunkett, who taught with Mrs. Davidson at Ellington High School, describes her as an outstanding, creative teacher who has the ability to "make each person feel a special part of the class." He continues, "Even though she's only been here for two years, the students see the quality in her teaching and the uniqueness of her classroom participations."

Mrs. Davidson is the advisor for the literary magazine In My Mind's Eye. She is also a senior class advisor this year.

Mrs. Policelli described her as a "truly excellent teacher who has clear academic standards for students, an abiding interest in each student, and the creativity to provide dynamic classes which demonstrate to students that learning can be enjoyable, intellectually stimulating and deeply personal." She has also been described as a truly superior, extremely caring and outstanding teacher.

One thing that makes her different is her philosophy of learning, which is that you learn by doing or experiencing. Last year, for instance, her classes had to put on a trial for Hamlet for 200 students in the auditorium. Turning a play which students often find boring into something that was fun and interesting, and which they will remember, is part of her unique style. For a final exam last year, one of her classes worked in groups to somehow, anyway they wanted, present what they had learned during the entire year. One group did a rendition of A Chorus Line and each audition contained a different piece of work or a different concept that had been studied during the year. Mrs. Davidson's students perform because they want to do a good job for her. Mr. Randazzo says, "students respect her and she shows that same kindness, caring and respect in return."

Mrs. Davidson has been told that she "eats, sleeps, lives and breathes this place." She says, "It must be obvious that this is a major part of my life. I've been really, really fortunate."

It is we, the students at South Windsor High School, that have really been fortunate to have a teacher and advisor as dedicated and caring as she. It is obvious how much she is loved and respected by all of us. The class of 1987 wishes to express its deepest appreciation to Mrs. Patricia Davidson.

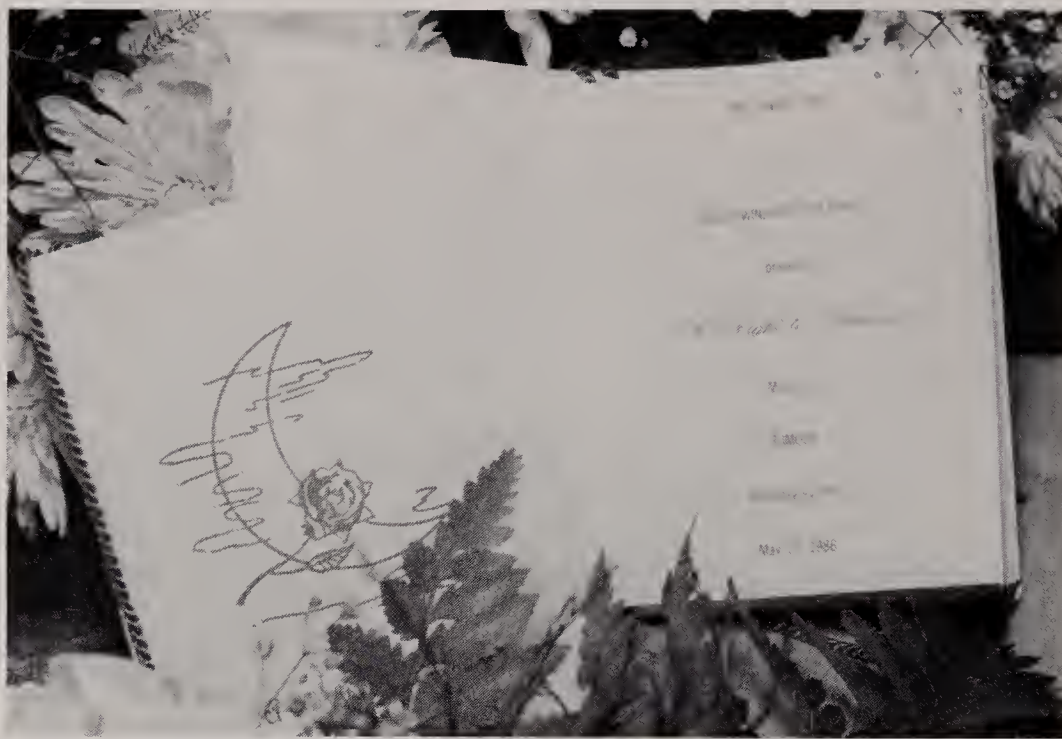

STUDENT LIFE

Junior Prom

The class of 1987 put on their dancing shoes, and spent the evening of May 17, 1986 swirling about the dance floor to the sounds of "Stepping Out."

It Truly was a "Night to Remember" for the class of '87. Years later they will turn back the pages of time and smile at the fond memories of their beautiful and enchanting Junior Prom.

Senior Dress up Day, the day that the senior class of 1987 showed South Windsor High School just of what they were made. The guys showed up decked out in suits and ties . . . or at least a nice sweater. And the girls were adorned in beautiful dresses and other outfits. When the seniors assembled in homeroom that morning, the sight was overwhelming. Never had South Windsor High seen such a classy group of students. The seniors faced the day with shining faces, bright smiles, and radiant outfits, never had the High School looked so good!

Tuesday, December 16, 1986 - will go down in history as a day when South Windsor had more than just a touch of class!

Following senior dress up day, on Friday, December 19th, the winter pep rally was held. In preparation for the pep rally students from all four classes spent many days after school and evenings making posters. All the classes took great care and effort in making posters for the pep rally, and Thursday night they took turns hanging up their posters for Friday's pep rally.

The pep rally was a great success. The sophomores came in first for loudness, but the seniors won overall; coming in first in posters and spirit - of course! All together spirit week was a great success!

Senior dress up day allows students to wear their "nice" clothes.

Dedicated students spend time to decorate the gym in Pep Rally fashion.

Julie Krawski preserves the spirit of winter for the Pep Rally as the season's mascot.

Seniors Lisa Visgilio and Stacy Backman line the posters with tape to display their artistic spirit during the winter Pep Rally.

See Charles Van Horn in his traditional Pep Rally dress, one of the true spiriters. Sided by Robyne and Stacy Backman.

South Windsor Football BEAST of the EAST!

'87 Varsity Football

The 1986 year was one of the most successful years in South Windsor football history. Considering how the season started it was nearly a miracle that the Bobcats finished 8-3 and won the conference championship.

At the end of the first four games the team's record was 1-3. South lost their first game to eventual state champion East Catholic. The Bobcats then beat Wethersfield by one point by stopping a two point conversion attempt with less than a minute left. However, the next two games resulted in heartbreaking losses at Windsor and Manchester. Also senior center and defensive end Jim Shuttleworth, an important part of the offensive and defensive lines, was lost for the year with a serious knee injury.

In the next seven games, however, the Bobcats turned it around, winning all seven. In six of those seven games the Bobcats trailed at one point. The team showed great strength of character and tremendous heart in having to come back in nearly every game.

Unfortunately the Bobcats fell short of their ultimate goal, playing in the state championship. In the complicated point system the CIAC uses to determine the qualifiers, the Bobcats fell short by one point to Masuk - Monroe. However, the team will remember all the good things; the seven game winning streak, the second consecutive conference championship, the great win at Glastonbury, the great plays by great players like Byron Womack's kickoff return at Glastonbury and finally all the players, managers and coaches will remember only that it was an unforgettable season.

Tim Sandquist breaks the tackle for a large gain.

NO PAIN NO GAIN!!!

McCarroll: Coach of the Year Bobcat Football

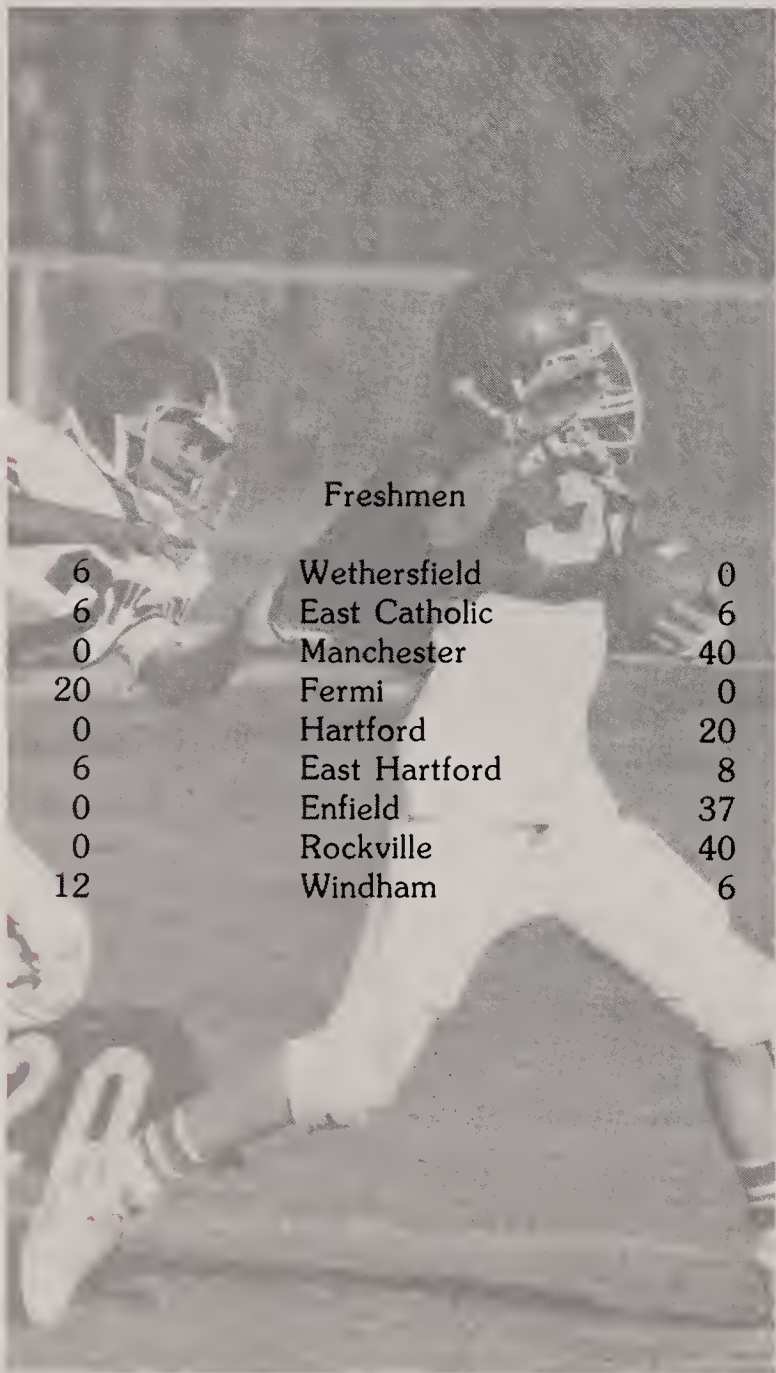

Bobcat football Coach McCarroll studies the game.

On January 29, 1987, Coach McCarroll received the "Coach of the Year" award for medium sized schools in Connecticut. This award was presented by the National Football Foundation and Hall of Fame, Northern Connecticut Chapter. It is the second time Coach has received this honor, the first being in 1976.

Coach said he was kind of surprised although very proud. He looks at this award as an honor to the whole football program, the assistant coaches, the team and especially the seniors. Coach accredited this award to the team's back-to-back outstanding seasons, and their record in the M Division.

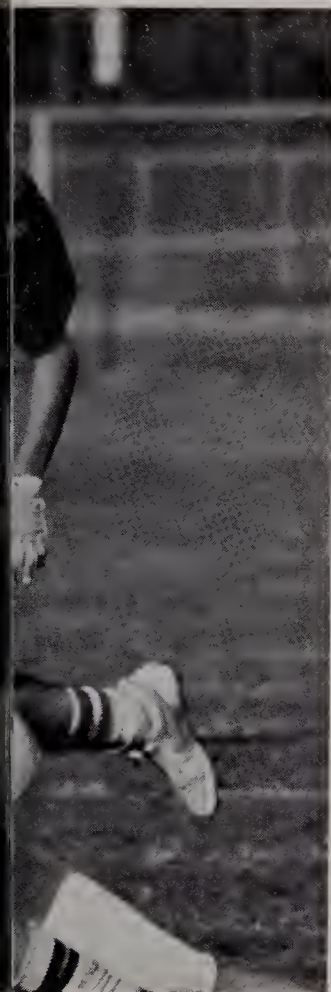

Way to hold him back guys!

It's all yours Matt.

The team had a very good season. Considering we had only three starters back and we were in a strong league, the boys did a fine job. Some of the highlights of the season were playing two night games and everybody putting forth effort in each game.

The most rewarding aspect of being a coach, to Coach Sharos, was being able to work with the young men day in and day out while watching them grow and develop as athletes and young people.

John Gehris goes for the corner kick.

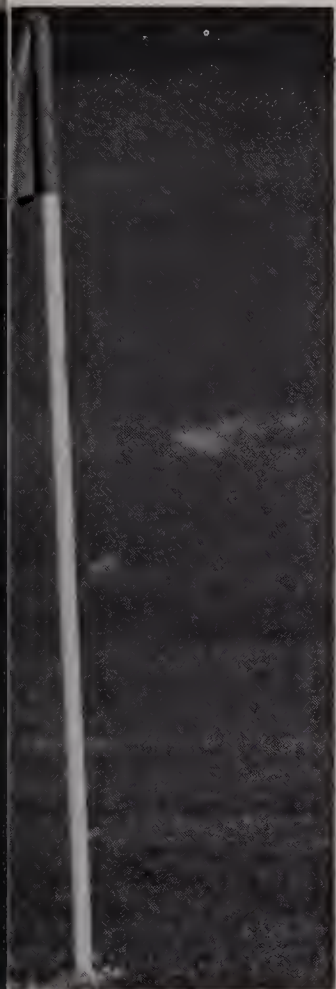

Brian Wood Travels with the ball while Bill Tellier prepares to assist.

Boy's JV Soccer

Coach Longo was very pleased with the way his team played. They worked hard and were well skilled. Twelve of his twenty-nine players scored goals this year. For Coach Longo, the most rewarding aspect is taking a group of virtual strangers in August and watching them grow as friends and as a team in September and October.

row 1- Coach Longo, C. Williams, T. Danigelis, C. Mauth, M. Helbig, T. Gozdeck, J. Alicki, M. Pudkalski, J. Olexy, W. Tellier, C. Dio, J. Robbins, A. Calderoni, D. Rapoza, C. Barresi, J. Hyde, J. gehris

Chris Mauth attempts to steal the ball from the opposing team.

Girl's Varsity Soccer

Coach Collins team suffered a great deal of injuries and never really got on track. They were very inconsistent but always played hard and never gave up. One of this season's highlights was Laurie St. Laurent being selected for the Hartford Courant and the Coaches Association all state teams. Another highlight was receiving the sportsmanship award from the Central Connecticut Board of Soccer Officials . . . quite an honor Coach Collins exclaims.

When being asked what was the most rewarding aspect of being a coach he replies, "Getting to know and work with some very special kids on a day to day basis was very rewarding. The friendship that develops and watching the kids grow and mature is extremely rewarding." After talking to Senior captain Laurie St. Laurent she said "We had the pleasure of having an exchange student from Denmark, Rikki Haehnel, playing for us." Their record ended up being 4-11-1.

Reflections of the year

Bobcat Gymnastics 1987

The team is basically young and inexperienced, but despite this fact the amount of learning and growing which has taken place in one season is certainly an encouraging factor, recalls Coach Susko Cutter.

Some of the highlights this season were: no falls on the beam routines, Kim's backtucks, taking turn at "crash and burn" stunts, trying to find the right music at a meet, and finally getting the uneven bars.

The Year In Sports 1987

ACTIVITIES

Concert Band

This year, our concert band, conducted by Mr. Lazzarini began by playing and marching for our school's home football games. Marching practice started off slow, but soon we were out every F period on the football field. Sometimes we were watched by interested fans, but many of our watchers were students who were bored with their classes and enjoyed a good giggle when seeing us messing up our formations, and chasing our lost music all over the field like a bunch of ants. However, we did get our act together and performed some exciting half-times shows.

After the season was over, we began working hard for the upcoming winter concert. Our first concert preparation had its difficulties. With marching music out of the way we had to get used to a totally different type of music. Also this year we recieved an entire new percussion section which also takes time to get used to. We achieved our goal and on December 12th, the concert was a success.; with played peices such as Symphaic Overture and The Thunderer March.

We went on immediately to prepare for the annual exchange concert. This year, our band traveled to Derry, NH., to perform with the Pinkerton Academy.

On March 12th, we boarded the buses after a three hour rehearsal, and started our three hour journey to Derry. When we arrived it was a bit awkward since we didn't know any of the Pinkerton band or what to say. Soon we started to get to know each other and we had another two hours rehearsal! Yuk! Believe me, my lips did not enjoy playing the trombone for five hours of rehearsal in one day!! After an hour or two I could feel the numbness going away and I actually had a little hope that my mouth would begin to function normally again. Soon we were given our housing assignments and went to our hosts homes.

The next day, we came back at 8:30 for yet another two hour rehearsal with Pinkerton. At this point I was smearing my lips with all the vaseline and chap stick I could find. The rehearsal went so well that we were done forty minutes ahead of schedule. Then the buses came and picked up our band to go to Boston Museum. Many band members were excited about going into Boston, but when we arrived at the Museum there was an hour and a half wait, so instead we went to Quincy Market. It was extremely crowded, but there were lots of different foods to choose from and many shops to go through. The most exciting part was seeing if we could pass for eighteen to get into this special technical store called Sharp Images. I was only a sophmore and I got in without a problem! We got back to Derry around 4:30 and went home for a little rest and food before the concert that night. The concert was another success and we boarded the buses the next morning, extremely tired from all the practicing.

Derry's band was well recieved when they arrived the next week. Their band was very surprised by the size of our gymnasium. We had another rehearsal, and that night we came back at 7:00 to celebrate the night away with a dance. It was a good way to get over the nervousness we had about the concert the next night.

With the exchange concert over, we again passed out music for yet another concert for the spring. This was our last concert for the year and we proceeded to try our best and make it a success like the others. With the Woodwind Ensemble, Brass Ensemble, Stage Band, and the whole Concert band combined, it was a fabulous concert.

Through thick and through thin (and Mr. Lazzarini's temper), we stuck together and created good music all year. Even with the difficulties, Mr. Lazzarini was completely satisfied with this year's performance and is very excited about next year's band.

"It's fun to play and you don't need any prior music knowledge."

-Jeanine Allard

No, that is not a typo. There really is a Recorder Ensemble. In fact, there has been a Recorder Ensemble for years. It is a very small group that only meets four out of six days in the Choral music room. Their advisor is Mr. Anderson who rehearses along with them playing the Bass recorder. Michelle Angel plays Alto, Jeanine Allard plays Tenor, and Ybonn Wanza plays Soprano. They have performed concerts at the Wood Memorial Library and at the elementary schools as well.

The members enjoy the class. "It's fun to play and you don't need any prior music knowledge.", says Jeanine. "And it's also an easy credit.", adds Michelle. They all like having Mr. Anderson as a teacher. "Mr. Anderson is cool, he is a very interesting guy to talk to." One of the members baked him a chocolate cake with chocolate chip frosting for his twenty-seventh birthday. It's usually a very relaxed atmosphere there.

Mr. Anderson was described as "easy going" by his students. He also teaches Electronic Music, and was the music director for this year's musical "Anything Goes".

The male Spectrum members display their despair at having "... soggy, soggy, soggy packages ..." during Christmas time.

At the Winter Choral Concert, four Spectrum members top off the song "Caroling, Caroling" with a climactic note.

The females of Spectrum show the frustration of last minute Christmas shopping.

Choral Spectrum

This year's Choral Spectrum consists of twenty-one members, ten guys and eleven girls, a very good mix of people, voices, and heights. Our Christmas Concert went quite well. We sang while we danced, sat, convulsed, and decorated a tree. While learning the songs is an integral part of spectrum, we also learn about music, and a little about ourselves and each other. Not everything to be learned in life can be taught in a classroom. Cooperation, teamwork, and a feeling of true togetherness are some of the things Spectrum teaches its members. Spectrum is one experience that many will never forget. It has influenced and affected many futures as much as the academics of high school

After our Christmas Concert, Choral Spectrum along with the members of Vocal Ensemble, performed at the Lighting of the Creshe on Sullivan Avenue. Since none of us really felt like going home after that, we decided to go to Hartford and sing the night away at the Festival of Lights.

Literary Magazine

"In My Mind's Eye" is South Windsor High School's literary magazine. The magazine is a relative newcomer to the high school, having made its debut last year. The first edition was approximately 25 pages containing the poems, short stories, and artwork of the students of South Windsor High School. The magazine is staffed entirely by students of the High School. The 87' magazine is directed by editor, Matthew Hawrylko and staff advisors Mrs. Davidson and Ms. Frost.

This year the staff hopes to effectively double the size of the first edition, while also increasing the quality and appearance of the magazine. This ambitious group met every Monday after school throughout the school year, and more often in spring to complete the final layout of the magazine. Anyone interested can join the magazine staff, the only requisite being dedication.

"In My Mind's Eye" gives recognition to writers outside of the classroom, and provides a place for students wishing to express themselves through ink and paper. The magazine promises to become one of the established activities of South Windsor High School, becoming another one of the fine productions for which South Windsor High School is known. The key to success of the literary magazine is the support and interaction of the student body. Without the submissions from the student body, "In My Mind's Eye" could not exist.

Student Council

Student Council was in a transitional state this year. Even with all the ambition and energy we possessed at the beginning of the year, we had trouble making the Student Council a success.

When the officers were elected in June, 1986, our advisor Mr. Foley announced he would not be able to oversee the council any longer because he would be occupied with directing the fall drama production. We were without an advisor. We would not get a new advisor, no one had the time. The Student Council was crippled from the start.

Matt Streeter, the president, worked with the limited help of Associate Principal Mr. Randazzo as an administrating advisor, but we were, for the most part, on our own.

The Student Council sponsored the Foreign Exchange Reception and the annual Bloodmobile. The two successes offset the early disappointment of an unsuccessful Halloween dance.

Outing Club

Canada

The Outing Club's ski trip to Canada was the wildest time I've ever had at a school related function. There was an almost total sense of freedom for three and a half days. My only regret is that I am a senior and won't be able to do it again next year.

The bus ride to Canada was the worst part, except the ride back, but both rides were fun. After what seemed like an endless time of conversation and laughter, we stopped at Burger King for eating and relaxing. We headed next for the Canadian border. We passed through the border with no problems, and continued driving through the night. After what seemed like an eternity, a cheer went up as the neon "Le Presidente" sign of our hotel was spotted. We disembarked and headed to our rooms; home for the next three days.

At about four o'clock in the morning, after much talking and ignoring of American movies dubbed over in French, we settled down for a good night's rest, and were awakened at six forty five by a chaperone pounding on the door. One by one we jumped in and out of a cold shower, got dressed and headed off to breakfast. Next, we went skiing.

The better part of the next two days were spent in the lodge, nursing what we were sure was Canadian frostbite. The third day on the otherhand was "fantastic" an Ron Rioux would say. The day was spent on wonderfully moguled glade trails, with only an occasional trip to the lodge for nourishment. I think Mount Sutton is on my personal top three mountains list.

After each day of skiing we headed back for dinner and a night on the town. Nights were spent in a pool hall/dance club/bar, where we had much fun. A quick taxi ride and we were back in our rooms again for general partying until the wee hours of the morning.

And then to the disappointment of all, except those needing a hot shower, we boarded the bus for home. This ride was the same as the ride up, except many people were very tired. We arrived home tired, hungry, slightly cold, and brimming with memories.

Math Team

The math team, though small in number, is large in spirit. The team travelled to other area high schools including East Hartford, Bristol Central, and Newington to participate in six Capital Area Mathematics League meets. At the meets each member of the "A-team," made up of two seniors, two juniors, and an underclassman, took three of five rounds ranging from arithmetic to trigonometry, from algebra to geometry. The members of the "B-team" also participated in three rounds of their choice although their scores were not tallied in the team total. The season was topped off with an awards banquet at Willie's Steak House. The team also participated in New England Mathematics League contests held each month at our home, Wapping School.

We'll never forget cookie runs, McDonald's dinners, and our varsity letters. We'll laugh, remembering those varsity jackets with "South Windsor Math" written on the back that none of us ever got. Right now, however, we'd like to thank our advisors Mr. Cloutman and Mr. Vanesse for their pencils and enthusiasm and also wish next year's team much luck.

Suppose Bob wanted to put up a clothesline in his yard extending from a 68 year old tree that is 112 feet high with its base 12 feet above sea level, to a post extending upwards at a 30 degree angle from his house. The house is 69 feet from the tree. The neighbor's dog makes a 90 degree angle between the house and the tree. If the dog can run at a rate of $9u$ feet per second while Mrs. Bob can take down clothes at a rate of $\frac{3}{5}u$ sheets per minute on a Sunday, but only $\frac{3}{8}u$ sheets per minute on Mondays and Wednesdays. Determine the rate at which the $f(u)$ divided by $d(u)$ overtakes the dog in search of his girlfriend Sally while Mrs. Bob is drying her laundry. (Hint: the clothesline is made of nylon)

National Honor Society

After the decision made last year not to accept junior class members, and the graduation of the class of 1986, the National Honor Society at SWHS was left without membership. That fact led this year's Class of '87 to start it up again.

As soon as we started the meetings officers were selected, and a second election was held as the result of a tie. Lisa Visgilio was elected President, Emma Hughes Vice President, and Lorraine Trusch Treasurer. We then started the year off with a food drive in November; our efforts going towards helping the needy. Although our rivals in the food drive, Glastonbury, beat us we were still able to help out those who were in need- the real reason behind the drive.

On Thursday, February 19th we officially became members of the National Honor Society, Wood Chapter, through an induction ceremony held at the school. Sunday, March 22nd was the date of our Annual Pancake Breakfast.

Of course, it is necessary to include the four points of NHS; leadership, character, scholarship, and service. Each member of this club must show all four points.

Future Business Leaders Of America

At the beginning of the year it seemed as though there would not be any Future Business Leaders of America; there were only three people at the first meeting. But then there came a simple idea- get teachers to recommend students. Now there are thirty-two FBLA members. The first order of business was the elections. After a vote was taken officers were elected: Craig Livingston as President, Diane Marotto as Vice President, Margo Gigerti and Kim Katzbeck as Secretaries, and later in the year Scott Katz was elected Treasurer.

The purpose of FBLA is to make money. We sell items such as the Village Shopper bears and candy. The profits allow us to take various field trips. We have gone to Morse School of Business, Milton Bradley, and a play in New York called South Pacific.

After the initial shaky beginning, the Future Business Leaders of America has just turned into a solid activity. I just hope it gets even better to make it a big part of this school.

It's not just "What do you say?", but also "What do you see?". For each student the term Activity has special meaning.

"We're late again" - "We missed the deadline" - "where's those photos?" - "Who ate my last piece of pizza?" - "Anybody have a car?" - "I don't understand" - "Skilton!!!" - "No Rob we can not leave out sports."

Centurion '87, it's a tough job, but someone's got to do it. This yearbook seemed to be a long time in coming. We had picture delays, senior write-up delays, . . . ect . . . ect. But due to the great efforts of the staff in the final weeks, we managed to meet our last deadline.

The yearbook has a different look this year with more writing and a more defined layout. This is due in part to Chris and Kevin Thomas, who attended a four day yearbook seminar/workshop held at Bryant College in Rhode Island. Editor, Beth Rittenband, worked hard in getting things together. Pete and Julie got the senior section moving; and Corey Wagner and Cheryl Fletterick worked hard on the underclassmen section.

Rob Darmen put in long hours on the faculty section; Maria Buckman and Lori Bazzano got the sports section rolling. Business manager, Matt Streeter, kept track of the books; and David Schwabe put together the Ad section, often with help from Brian and Jalet on the typesetter. Kristie Brand worked her fingers to the bone-so to speak - typing out copy sheets; and Jeff Skilton and Heather Elliot got the photographs scheduled, taken, processed, sometimes lost, and found (or is it lost, and sometimes found?).

In spite of delays, last minute work, and plenty of arguments, the 1987 Centurion came together at long last. Thanks should go out to all those who put in their time and effort to work and work until they did not know how to do anything else anymore. The enormous efforts put in by the few people who ate, slept, and breathed this yearbook are greatly appreciated.

Bill "Willy" Nelson
Yearbook Advisor

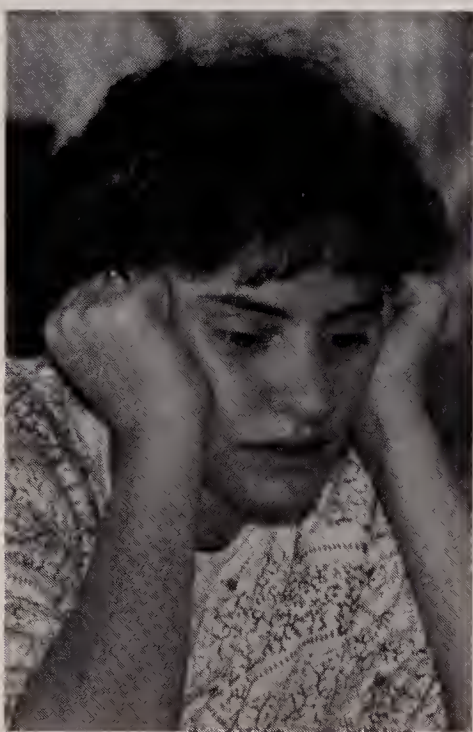

You can always tell how far behind schedual the staff is by measuring how deep the clutter is.

One of the first editorial meetings of the year was to decide exactly how many pages to allot each section. This, of course, was of no consequence since we never followed it anyways.

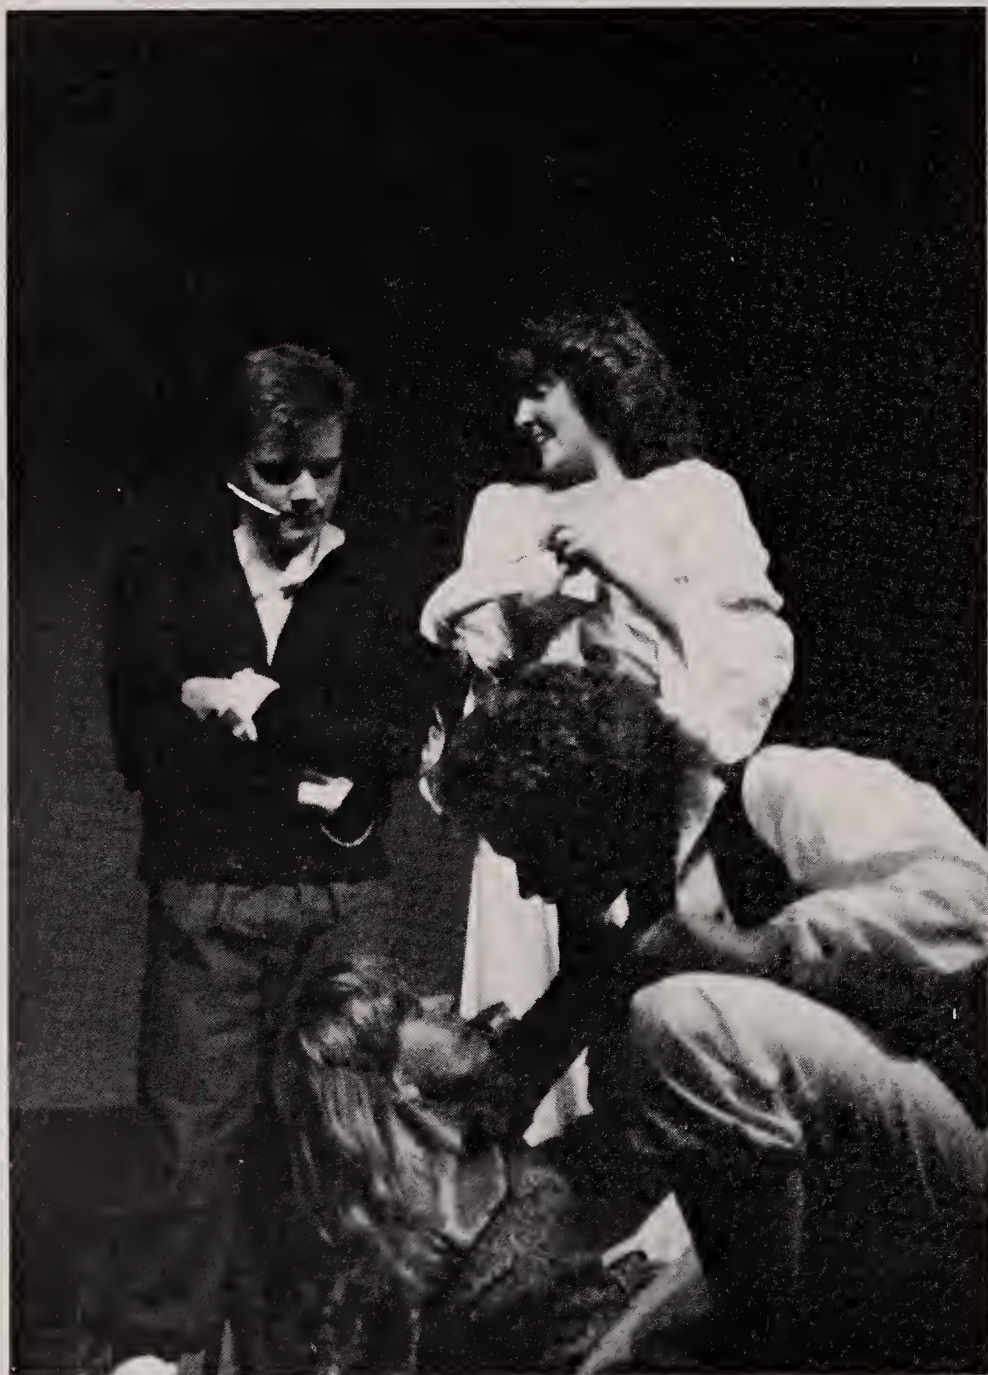

Beth Rittenband; A portrait of an Editor.

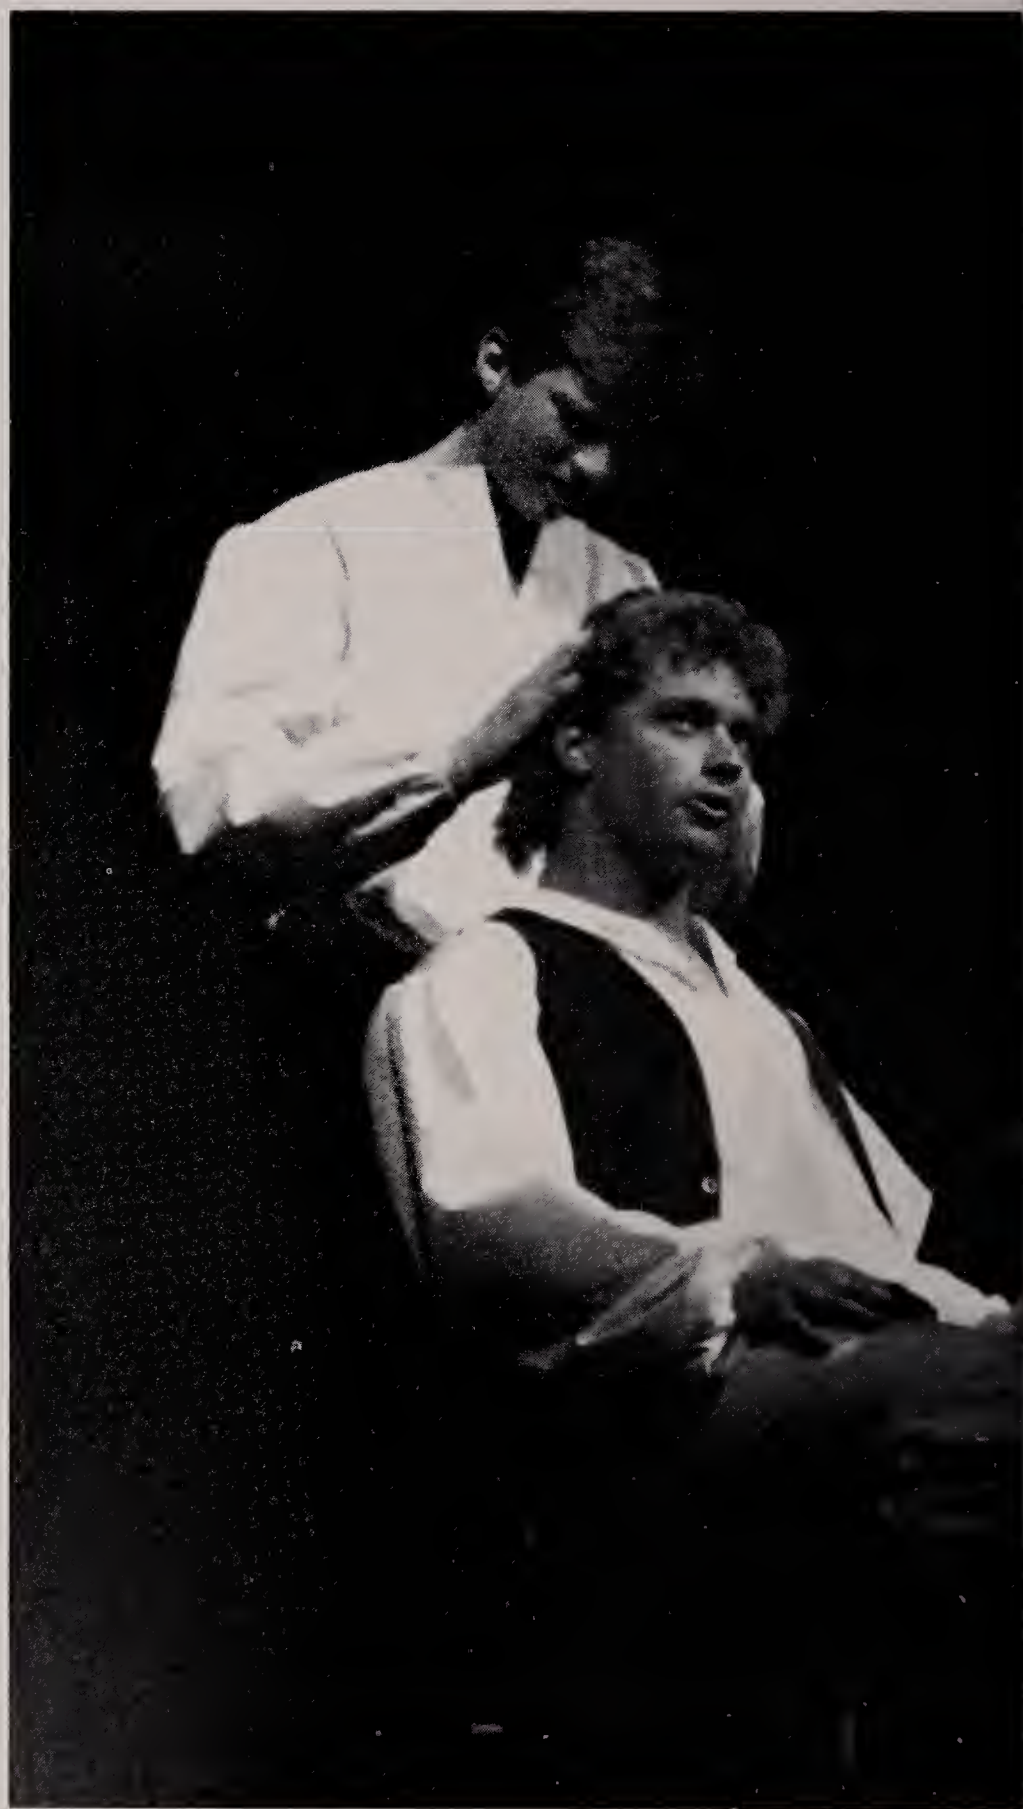

In the early days of production while working in the color section, Rob Darman, faculty editor, sifts through an endless pile of negatives looking for the elusive picture of the flag.

After striking Blifil, Tom Jones (Michael Sladyk) helps Sophia (Kim Corwin) to her feet as Miss Western (Stacey Miller) tells her brother, Mr. Western (Jim Woodard), that she has deduced Sophia's love for Blifil.

New to this year was the directing talent of Mr. Foley.

Mr. Partridge (Royce Palmer) inspects a cut Tom received from a highway man (Dan Sherwood) on his way to the inn at Uptown.

Mrs. Whitefield (Dana Koeing) greets Tom and Mrs. Waters (Margie Callan) at the Inn at Uptown.

Lady Belleston (Anne-Marie Lohman) tries to seduce the innocent Tom when he returns Sophia's muff that he found at the Inn at Uptown.

Drama Club

The stage. A place to escape from reality. The Drama Club's production of Tom Jones introduced a new element in their fall show, actually a new director, one Steve Foley. This was not his first shot at directing, however. He was the director at Windsor Locks High School. This does not mean he wasn't nervous. On the contrary, he said he felt like a rookie being watched over to see if he falls flat. He chose this play because of its diverse selection of roles. There was an even number of male and female parts with lead and supporting roles. This was also a play written with an audience in mind. The object was to bring them into the play with us and make them part of the show.

The stage. A barren place to build our own fantasy. Our stage crew did not have a lot to do for the shows. All we really needed were three door frames and two silhouettes of english manor houses. For a backdrop we used a blue cyclorama with the houses in front of it. After that was done, all we had to do was finish the set with props. Some things we retrieved from past shows, like the moon and tree. The stage crew was non-existent during show time. All the scenes were changed by the actors with the curtain open. This was not too much different than having a crew, considering some of the crew were also actors.

The stage. A dark place where we let light in. Before the show can go on, lights must be present to the exact location the actors will be. Then color was added. Different cells were slid in front of the lights to create the effect we wanted. It was just like designing your own sunrise.

The stage. A place where Dr. Jekyll becomes Mr. Hyde. In order to see the actors on stage make up is a must. Without it we would all have blank, flesh colored slates for faces. The standard application process consisted of a base, the tones varied from pale skin to a California suntan. Next we put on eyeliner, and lipstick so you could see us talk. Some of us received a little more transformation. Wrinkles were pencilled on, and hair was instantly grayed.

The stage. A place where a Prince becomes a Pauper. Our show was scheduled for Friday and Saturday night on November fourteenth and Fifteenth. On Thursday, November thirteenth, most of our cast visited Manchester High School. They were also performing Tom Jones, but on three nights, not just two. You can chalk it up to professional curiosity. We were interested in finding how this play looked from the audience point of view. It was also for seeing how someone else portrayed your character. One of the big differences between the shows was the pronunciation of the name Blifil. They pronounced it with a long first "i" (this was usually accompanied by a few subdued chuckles from us). The final curtain fell and we gave them a long standing ovation. We knew the work involved to pull off a show like this and that in itself warranted our applause. After the show we stayed to meet the cast. We left feeling confident in our abilities and in the quality of our own version of Tom Jones.

The stage. A place that is now empty and deserted. Through sheer concentration and surges of adrenaline we gave this school one of the best fall productions in years. It is difficult to convey the feeling we all felt those two nights in the auditorium. The best way I can think of is a feeling of hunger and focused attention. You don't think about anything else. You watch and listen for your cue, then you are on. Your hunger is satisfied. The words flow from your lips like they were your own. No stray thoughts are allowed as you go through the motions. You exit, you hunger. The curtain does not even close, that's what kind of play this is. We file silently down to the Choral Music room and indulge in a group primal scream. It's party time!

Friday night, Friendly's restaurant was the victim of an invasion from a horde of Hungry Eye-lined Thesbian Teenagers. There we wound down and satisfied our hunger once and for all, or at least until the next night. On Saturday night Kim Corwin, who played Miss Sophia Western, opened her house to us. There was pizza galore and sodas to match. Everyone who was involved in the show was there, the cast, the crews, the director, the band, the conductor, and some people who weren't involved, friends and family from past years.

The stage. A place to escape from reality, and so much more.

Squire Allworthy (Fran Albano) informs his nephew Blifil (Todd Kadish) that he wishes for the marriage of him and the Lady Sophia, the daughter of Mr. Western.

Tom Jones leads the Doctor (Kevin Thomas) to Squire Allworthy's wrist after he tried to take his own pulse.

The play opened with all the actors walking on stage in groups of two or three to a fairy tale tune. At the mention of Brigit Allworthy by Partridge, the narrator of the play, the rest of the cast slowly exited.

Squire Allworthy asks one of his servants (Audrey Welch) if she knows who the mother of the child that he found on his pillow is. At the end of the play, he finds out that it is really his sister, Brigit's (Wendy Hildebrand), son and not Jenny Jones' (Mrs. Waters) at all.

A previously thought to be dead Mr. Fitzpatrick (Chris Thomas) apologizes to his wife, Harriet (Jeanine Allard), in the courtroom that is trying Tom Jones for murdering him. He regrets tying her to his bed and feeding her boiled potatoes.

SAFE RIDES

"Hello, South Windsor Safe Rides"

Silence

"Hello . . . ?"

"Uh . . . hello?"

"Do you need a ride?"

"Uh . . . yeah."

"Okay, what is your first name?"

"Uh . . . Pete."

"Okay Pete, where are you?"

"Uh, at a party."

"Okay . . . , where are you going?"

"Home."

"Where's home Pete?"

"Uh, in South Windsor."

"Good Pete, where in South Windsor?"

Address is given

"Now where are we, Pete?"

Present position given

"We'll be there in about fifteen minutes."

"Uh . . . okay, bye."

"Bye."

This is a sample call out of about two hundred Safe Rides has had since its opening in the spring of 1985. Not all were like what happened above, some were people who did not want to drive with someone intoxicated, and others just had no other way to get home, but those difficult calls took ten minutes to get the required information.

From ten at night to two in the morning, three to mmmrrphh people (never exceeding our maximum number, of course) sat in the Wapping Community Center at the corner of Ellington Road and Sullivan Avenue. There we would either play ping-pong, pool, or cards (never for money). This is the perfect place for gathering with friends, after all, where else are you going to be able to get out of the house until 2 a.m. with your parents approval. I know, as a Senior, that it is extremely difficult finding time to talk with my friends because of a schedual filled with work and other activities, plus homework. Working Safe Rides is one the few chances I get to do that.

After the near dormant summer of '86 we started to pick up momentum with our first fund-raiser, a Halloween Haunted House. The fun house was planned and constructed by the student members of Safe Rides at the high school. We use a couple of flashing strobelights in the rooms where some of us were monsters who attacked the "guests." The strobes created a stop motion photography effect that was very disorienting. Dry ice helped create an eerie ground fog in the cemetery with gravestones sporting several creative epitaths dealing with Safe Rides. Other obstacles of the fun house was a hall of spiderwebs, a cackling witch, and a groping hand from under the stairs or from out of the walls itself. Guides, some of us in costume, led the the visitors through the gauntlet while spinning a tale of the denizens of our Haunted House.

Our next fund-raiser was something a little different, a Hardcore Music Show at the high school. The show feature Chronic Disorder, Big Gulp, and Inquire Within (all from South Windsor), along with Green Panic and FM (who are not). This was a colorful event that showed that there are punks in this town who support their scene, even in the midst of a snowstrom.

In January, Safe Rides accompanied the C.Y.O. (Christian Youth Organization) group, along with some '86 graduates, to their annual trip to the Pines ski resort in New York. We left South Windsor early Friday morning for a three hour bus ride. Before noon we were on the slopes. The Pines had excellent hills for a first time skier, but those of us who were more experienced found other forms of amusement back at the lodge. The slopes closed at four o'clock, so everyone went back to their rooms to get prepared for dinner. All our meals were "all you can eat," even though some of us ate more than that. Ice skating and swimming in an indoor, heated pool were available for the evening. Late night entertainment for some of us included the classic thriller on HBO, The Re-Animator. Saturday followed much the same way, although we didn't get up quite so early. On Sunday we grudgingly left at approximately four in the afternoon.

Kevin Thomas, a senior member of Safe Rides, expresses how people should act at two o'clock, Sunday morning.

With many of our active members graduating this year and going to school in the fall, we will have a shortage of members. If you are interested in working with us, either drop in once in a while or give us a call.

One nights work team, plus three officers, begin their four hour by playing cards.

Inquire Within members: Daryl Vallez, Luigi, Rich Damiano, and Dean Baltulonis warm up before thier first show.

On the last day of the Pines trip, some Safe Rides members were coersed into standing in front of a camera so the tall kid in back without the glasses could remember how we all dressed.

Rob Darman, the president of Safe Rides, watches yet another ball sink while playing bumper pool.

A sophmore Safe Rides member, Brenda Starkweather, does what many of us did that ski weekend.

... Dusty late afternoon sunlight drifts lazily through the window, slanting into a lonely teacher's bent head. It falls gently on the stacks of paper, carressing the worn and tired teacher's shoulder.

The light fades, but the teacher works on, oblivious to the unrelenting measures of time, involved in work far more important than the mere counting of seconds.

Night falls, and the teacher carefully packs a tattered bag with the fruits of his labor. Sometimes, they are not so good. Sometimes, they are filled with those infectious diseases, hate and uncaring.

But sometimes... sometimes they are filled with fruit so wonderful, so unimaginigly good... and that is why a teacher will come back tomorrow.

The teacher, after a few moments of thought, locks the door and slowly walks down the hall towards the darkening twilight.

Happy is he who can look back on his doings and be pleased with his efforts. Happier still he who can look forward to a life of work he values above all other occupations. Happiest of all he who is doing what he loves and the world thanks him for it. Teaching is such a "doing" which I consider most vital to all whom I know, with fond memories of those I've known and warm anticipation for those I will meet. Once we learn to lift our sights above our daily troubles, a teacher's path is filled with a continuing reward, the likes of which are seldom found in any other walk of life.

Not many professions are at once as humbling and edifying as is teaching. I feel about teaching English much like Dylan Thomas felt about being a poet: "I labour by singing light/ not for ambition or bread/ or the strut and trade of charms/ on the ivory stages." Although Thomas goes on to explain that he writes his verse for those who "pay no praise or wages/ nor heed to my craft or art," I find that I teach for many who do praise and heed this craft. The wages come in ways that are difficult to weigh and measure, in someone's excitement about an idea, in the end of a struggle, in the moment of understanding that makes for a common bond. And yes, I guess I tend to think that "all the women are strong, the men good looking and the children above average."

In today's competitive society, with the accent of values being on material wealth, children are encouraged to get good grades which will, in turn, lead them into better colleges. Upon graduation they will be able to open the doors to more lucrative professions. What is offered to the students along with the way to help him become sensitive, creative, perceptive and expressive human being? What can our public education offer the young member of society to help him nurture these traits which are necessary for being a whole person and a well rounded individual? Academic areas such as languages, sciences, and mathematics provide students with knowledge, skills, and understanding of these areas. Sports programs build strong bodies and team spirit, but where in the curriculum does the student turn for aesthetic development?

The importance of nurturing this aesthetic sense is important at any early age but it is unfortunate that some parents are not aware, or do not take the time to encourage this area of their child's development. Some parents can afford, and do give their children the experience of private artistic education such as music and dance. Unfortunately, there are many other parents who cannot afford or cannot foresee the value of this experience for their child's development. It is for this reason that public education should provide the opportunities for the student's personal development and aesthetic growth.

recognizing, recalling, relating, identifying, matching, comparing, discriminating and many other behaviors, but all remain objective in nature.

Aesthetic reaction, which is totally subjective, cannot be taught but education can provide the opportunities for the student to develop his ability to have aesthetic experiences and creative reactions.

Aesthetic experiences can be experienced at a very early age in basic forms. My two and a half year old son enjoys picking marigolds daily, sometimes three or four times a day! When asked why he liked picking marigolds he replied, "They smell nice." "They're pretty." At this tender age he already has a sense of what is beautiful and pleasing to him. I, as a parent, will try to best nurture this sense and to offer him every opportunity to develop this natural human need through the teaching of aesthetic perceptions in a context which will nurture his creativity.

Music is an important area in which this growth can take place. The Music Education program should offer the opportunity for the student to learn skills. To provide for the understanding of music and to encourage creativity. Through the careful development of these areas the student's musical perceptions will amplify his musical aesthetic experience.

To provide the opportunity to be a part of a performing group is one important means for aesthetic development. By learning and performing musical works artistically and expressively, and sharing this experience with their fellow students (in groups), audience and conductor, students can experience an inner satisfaction and joy. This experience cannot be duplicated elsewhere in any way.

For most of those students who have not continued their musical endeavors, I'm certain that they have an appreciation, and experience music more personally and empathetically than those who have never been part of a musical organization. I'm also certain that they will try to instill in their own children those elements of life which are beautiful to experience.

Aesthetic perception can be taught by combining behaviors of Albert Einstein contended that "education is that which remains when one had forgotten everything learned in school." The students of today are the nations future tomorrow. They will have to possess a level of confidence and self-esteem to meet that challenge. Independent and analytical thinking skills will help then to find answers to questions faced. They must be aware of the limits of their rights and the extents of their responsibilities in society. As an educator, I may impart facts which might be forgotten but it is my sincere hope that I have played a significant role in that remainder to which Einstein refers.
